31st January 2017

Dear ladies and gentlemen,

In co-operation with University of Veterinary Medicine Vienna, the European-Enterprise-Network Austria, we organise the 6th FOODSEG Symposium in Vienna, Austria.

This annual Symposium is the main result of the EU-funded project FOODSEG. FOODSEG is still alive as a European network (www.foodseg.net) of experts along the whole feed and food value chain in order to secure food safety and quality for the consumers.

The FOODSEG Symposium is a platform for personal meetings and discussions on future co-operations and common future projects in H2020 and other funding programmes. This year it will take place at the University of Veterinary Medicine Vienna, Austria.

The symposium is organised as a two-day event with an international brokerage and collaborating event, lectures and interactive sessions and excursions. Our target groups are experts from academia, research, industry, SMEs, decision-makers, policy-makers, etc. who have expertise that fits into the whole feed-food chain, from agriculture, feed production, animal health and production, food production, food & feed safety and quality, quality of life for consumers, consumers information, traceability, authentication, and many more.

We expect about 100 participants who actively work on new collaborations and project ideas for the future.

We invite you to support our 6th FOODSEG Symposium and make it a successful event by selecting one of the following sponsorship packages.

The packages mainly include a certain amount of registrations for participants from your organisation and different kind of promotion possibilities about your company, expertise, services and products.
